FRIG COLLECTION

We know where to go.

Blue sails, quiet coves, and no need to explain.

Duramaz is a 30-metre ketch built in 2005, recognisable by her blue sails and the kind of easy presence that makes people on shore stop and look. She carries twelve guests in six cabins — two masters, two doubles, two twins — each with its own bathroom and climate control. A crew of four runs the boat with the calm efficiency that comes from years on this coast.

She holds 15,000 litres of fresh water and carries a water maker, which means longer routes between ports without compromise. Two generators (33 + 45 KWA) provide 78 KWA of total power — enough to keep the air conditioning, the galley, and the entertainment systems running simultaneously without thinking about it.

On deck, the aft dining area seats everyone, and the saloon opens directly to it. A joystick rudder system gives the captain precise control in tight anchorages. Below, the interiors are warm and timber-lined, with a telephone system connecting cabins — a small detail that says something about how the boat was thought through.

Thirty metres with blue sails — 15,000 litres of water, a water maker, and a crew of four who know the coast by heart.

The saloon — timber-lined, with a full entertainment system and direct access to the aft deck.

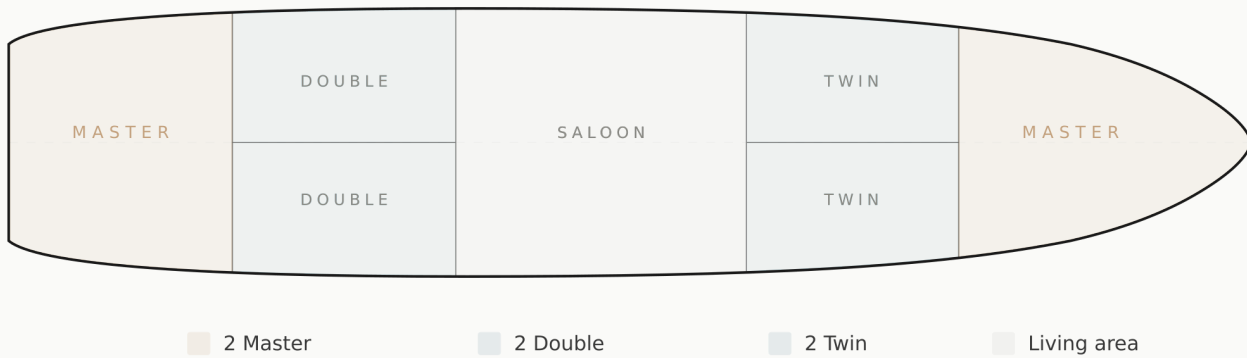

Six cabins, six bathrooms — every guest gets their own space, their own shower, their own door to close.

LAYOUT

How the space works.

Duramaz distributes her six cabins across the lower deck with clear separation between guest and crew areas. The aft master is the largest, set apart from the corridor. A second master sits forward. Doubles and twins fill the centre, each with full en-suite facilities. The crew quarters are aft and self-contained, with a galley that opens to both the saloon and the deck.

2 MASTER CABINS

Double beds, en-suite bathrooms, TV, music system, minibar, and individual climate control. Fore and aft positions for privacy.

2 DOUBLE CABINS

Double beds, en-suite with shower and WC, TV, music system, air conditioning. Centrally located for a steady ride at anchor.

2 TWIN CABINS

Twin beds, en-suite bathrooms, full climate control. Practical for friends, siblings, or anyone who prefers their own bed.
