Greek waters, a jacuzzi on deck, and nowhere to be.

Good Life is a 35-metre gulet that operates in Greek waters — the Dodecanese, the Cyclades, the Saronic Gulf, and everywhere in between. She's one of the few boats in the fleet based permanently in Greece, which means a crew that knows these islands the way local fishermen do: the right taverna, the quiet beach, the anchorage that catches the evening breeze.

Five cabins sit below deck — one master and four doubles — each with en-suite bathrooms and air conditioning. Up top, a jacuzzi on the foredeck and a broad aft dining area that seats everyone comfortably. The toy chest runs deep: two jet skis, two Seabobs, wakeboard, water ski, banana, kneeboard, and more.

A crew of six runs everything with the kind of ease that makes the days feel unplanned — even when they aren't. Twin 610 HP engines give her the range to move between islands without lingering at fuel docks.

Thirty-five metres of gulet, based in Greece — twin-engined, jacuzzi-equipped, and built for island-hopping.

LAYOUT

How the space works.

Good Life's layout balances private and social spaces well. Five cabins below deck — the master aft with the most room, four doubles forward — all with en-suite bathrooms and individual climate control. The saloon opens to the aft dining area, and the foredeck hosts the jacuzzi and sunbathing space. Crew quarters are fully separate with their own access.
