FRIG COLLECTION

We know where to go.

Twenty people, ten cabins, and the whole coast ahead.

Kayhan 11 is the largest boat in the Alesta fleet — 34 metres, ten cabins, and capacity for twenty guests. She was built in 2002 for groups that don't want to split across two boats: extended families, celebrations, reunions, or any gathering where being together on the water matters more than being on the newest hull.

The cabins are arranged across two deck levels — six doubles and four twins — each with its own en-suite bathroom, air conditioning, and shower. A crew of six runs the boat, including a dedicated chef. Twin 450 HP IVECO engines and 90 KWA of generator power mean she can sustain twenty guests in full comfort without slowing down.

Above deck, the space matches the scale: a wide aft dining area under a full tente, a flybridge, and a foredeck with enough room for everyone to find their own place. She carries 20,000 litres of water and a water maker — the kind of reserves that let you stay out longer and stop less often.

Ten cabins across two levels — the flybridge becomes a second living room when twenty guests need room to breathe.

The saloon — central, warm, and large enough that twenty guests never feel crowded.

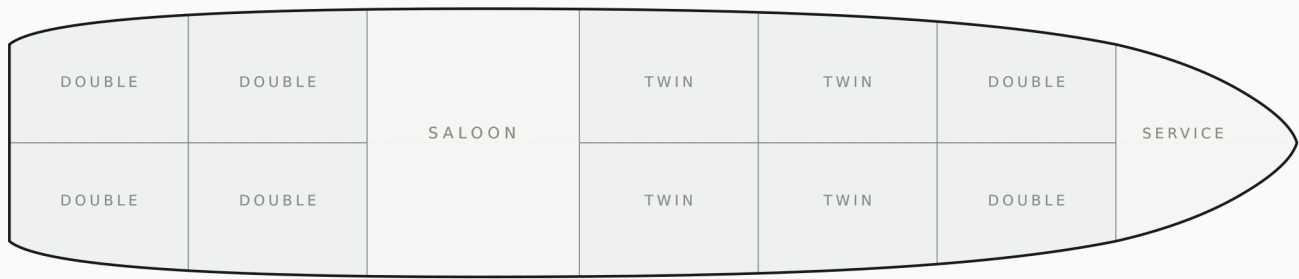

Each of the ten cabins carries its own bathroom, air conditioning, and the quiet of a well-built hull.

LAYOUT

How the space works.

Kayhan 11's ten cabins are distributed across two deck levels — a rare arrangement for a ketch. Six double cabins and four twins fill the lower decks, each with full en-suite facilities. The crew quarters are separate and self-contained. Above, the saloon opens to the aft dining area, and the flybridge provides a second gathering point with views over the anchorage.
