Room for twelve, built like a family table.

Kayhan 3 is a 26-metre ketch launched in 2014 — the newest boat in the Alesta fleet. She was built to carry groups comfortably: five cabins, twelve guests, and a layout that gives families or friends enough space to spread out without losing each other.

Two of the cabins are triple-berth — a double bed and a single in each — which makes her particularly well-suited for families with older children. The master sits aft with its own en-suite, and two twin cabins fill the midship section. Every cabin has air conditioning, a private bathroom, and enough room to unpack properly.

On deck, a wide aft area seats everyone for meals under the tente, and the foredeck carries six sunbathing cushions for the afternoons when nobody wants to talk. A crew of four handles everything — from anchoring in quiet coves to setting the table.

Five cabins, twelve guests, and a foredeck wide enough for six — Kayhan 3 is built around the idea that everyone should fit.

LAYOUT

How the space works.

The master cabin sits aft, set apart from the rest with its own en-suite and a generous footprint. Forward, two twin cabins occupy the middle section while two triple cabins — each with a double and a single bed — fill the bow. The galley and crew quarters are separate, and the saloon opens naturally to the aft deck dining area.
