The flagship of the fleet, and the room to prove it.

Kayhan Kaptan is the largest and most capable boat in the Alesta fleet — a 37-metre gulet with the kind of beam (8.50m) and tank capacity that most ketches can't match. She holds 25,000 litres of fresh water and 13,000 litres of fuel, which means she can stay out longer, travel further, and provision for twelve guests without thinking about the next port.

Six double cabins sit below deck, each with en-suite bathrooms, air conditioning, and a sense of space that comes from the gulet's wider hull. A bow thruster makes her surprisingly precise in tight anchorages — a detail that matters when you're dropping anchor in a cove that most boats this size would skip.

A crew of five runs everything: cooking, navigating, anchoring, and keeping the teak deck and timber saloon in the kind of condition that makes the boat feel cared for rather than just maintained. Twin 450 HP IVECO engines and 90 KWA of generator power keep things running quietly in the background.

Thirty-seven metres of gulet — wide-beamed, twin-engined, with a bow thruster for the anchorages that matter most.

LAYOUT

How the space works.

---

Kayhan Kaptan's gulet hull gives her a wider beam than any ketch in the fleet. Six double cabins are arranged symmetrically below deck, each with full en-suite facilities. The saloon sits centrally, opening aft to the main dining area. Crew quarters are fully separate, and the galley is positioned to serve both the saloon and the outdoor table without crossing guest space.

6 DOUBLE CABINS

All six cabins share the same standard: double beds, en-suite bathrooms with shower and WC, air conditioning, and individual climate control. The gulet's beam gives each cabin a generous footprint — wider than a comparable ketch cabin.

CREW QUARTERS

Five crew in self-contained quarters, fully separated from guest areas. Captain, chef, and three sailors — experienced with this coast and this boat.
